Infrastructure – Lifting Potential Growth

#1

Infrastructure : Lifting Potential Growth

What is Necessary to Continue on the Path of Building Quality Infrastructure

- › Need to have a higher level of private sector financing and resource mobilization from new sources
- › Need policy and institutional support from central as well as state and local governments
- › Construction of an index that tracks utilization rates of infrastructure facilities would shed light on sub-sectors where there is oversupply or shortfall
- › Need systematic collection of information on infrastructure-oriented financial flows
- › Project-wise and sector-wise information on physical progress needs to be revised

Climate Change and India

Developing countries need to be free to choose their own climate action pathways

- › India must adopt its own rooted sustainable practices and embrace others' only when they are suitable and sustainable
- › India's ethos offers sustainable solutions to problems plaguing market societies

Problem	Solution
Process of meat production threatening permanent degradation of land, water and natural resources	Traditional farming practices such as repurposing farm waste and byproducts from other agricultural activities as animal feed
Nucleated families requiring significant land and environmental resources	Traditional multi-generational households as pathway to sustainable housing

Climate Change and India: Why We Must Look at the Problem through Our Lens

Global strategies for climate change are flawed

- › Western approach does not seek to address the root of the problem, i.e., overconsumption
- › Global pursuit of energy-guzzling technologies such as AI and large-scale mining has contributed to higher fossil fuel consumption
- › Their practices ignore humans' underlying relationship with Nature
