SO IT'S TIME

Let's start

ARTICLE

Centre has no new data on child labour

ARTICLE

The Centre does not have any data on child labour in the country and a reason for this is the drying up of budgetary provisions meant for the National Child Labour Project (NCLP), which had been monitoring the issue for about three decades. The Labour Ministry is learnt to have told the Parliament Standing Committee on Labour, headed by veteran Biju Janata Dal (BJD) MP Bhartruhari Mahtab, that since the NCLP was merged with the Samagra Shiksha Abhiyan in 2016, the Ministry has no records of child labour. The currently available data is of the 2011 Census, which says the country has more than a million child labourers. Last year, the panel had pulled up the Centre for lack of data on migrant workers.

ARTICLE

Searching for proper data on child labour, the Standing Committee reached out to 14 Union Ministries and Departments, including the Home Ministry, Women and Child Development Ministry and several States. “Almost all the Ministries have told us that they do not have any data. The Labour Ministry says that we may have to wait till the next census to make an assessment of the number. The NCLP’s schools for child labourers work for three to four years and they have also more or less stopped functioning due to scarcity of funds. Education Ministry also does not have a mechanism to find out the number of children engaged in child labour. This is a serious situation,” a senior member in the panel said. It is for the first time that a parliamentary panel is engaged in a detailed examination of the national policy on child labour.

ARTICLE

The member said though we have legislation, the Child Labour (Prohibition and Regulation) Act, since 1986 the menace of child labour is continue unchecked.

“We have received some empirical reports by certain NGOs that child labour has increased after the pandemic. We are specifically looking into this issue. It means, children are more vulnerable now and lack of data will hamper any efforts to help them,” the member said.
