SBI PO MOST EXPECTED PAPER 2023

There is a debate around the issue of whether humans (1) (receive) a moral sense or acquire it as we grow. One school of thought argues that morality in humans is deeply (2) (connected) with our evolutionary and cultural past. Charles Darwin (3) (suggest) to it and more recently E. O. Wilson has been at the (4) (lead) of pushing this idea forward. Essentially, it has been suggested that moral preferences have been (5) (shaped) through millions of years by evolutionary forces. If social psychologist Jonathan Haidt is correct, moral judgments are, in effect, automatic and intuitive. Experiences, family, upbringing, and culture play a crucial role in developing a moral sense.
